Draft Dodging Fortunate Son #47 says NATO Allies during the War on Terror, "stayed a little back".

"It ain't me, it ain't me, I ain't no senators son, it ain't me, it ain't me, I ain't no fortunate one..."

Fortunate Son - Creedence Clearwater Revival

Fogerty wrote the famous CCR track in protest to the infamously unpopular Vietnam War. With lyrics that rung in the ears of many, they suggest that the working classes are always those that are sent into the maws of the dogs of war, rather than the silver spooned elite nepo babies - specifically tangerine skinned lummoxes such as the fool that currently sits as wannabe dictator of the Free World; DONALD J. TRUMP.

It is of course ironic, how considering that Fortunate Son is an obvious anti-war anthem, that it is just as synonymous with protest as it is with pop culture - due to it's overuse in Vietnam war films - that the thinning candyfloss haired orangutan played it during his abysmal military parade in 2025. Anyone else remember the drone operators, that walked along with their tech aloft like they were in show and tell?

The song of course, although being ill fitting for such a display of the US's self-proclaimed military might, was fitting for the man of the hour himself. The US president should claim royalties from CCR, considering that the lyrics are all about fortunate fucks like him. The man who is now the absolute representation of the death of the American Dream, embodying the very essence of evil that sits pretty in an office that has plenty of grey and aging men, who gather around big oak tables creating conflicts for the working class lads and ladies to die in.

Trump is prime example of the act of capitalist domination in the land of the so called free. Tactics include, raping the American Dream into submission, whilst grabbing what you want and in whichever way you want despite the dreams protestations. Sellout peers, dog competitors with threats of lawsuits, and protect those that can destroy everything he's worked for due to their nefarious and deviant obsessions, whilst dodging any true patriotic duties and insulting those that have served with belittlement that can only make you seem tall by comparison - it's clear this is the way of America in these modern times, because it's these very acts that earned Trump the keys to the big White House.

It is no shock of course, that Trump as part of his small ego power plays, wishes to try to lie his way into making America seem like it's entering a golden age, by insisting supremacy in his nation above all others, by doing what bullies do best; lie and tell tall tales, whilst belittling those that actually have strength. Which is exactly what happened whilst at the World Economic Forum in Davos. Trump talked of his concerns and doubts that NATO would ever step up to the plate if the Americans should need it. Despite Secretary General Mark Rutte's face to face sit down to discuss and remind how the only time Article 5 has been enacted, was by a post 9/11 America - resulting in all NATO countries coming to their aid, and offering boots on the ground in Iraq and Afghanistan - Trump of course sat there quietly, acting as if he was listening, but as soon as he stepped away from the elites at the forum, he speaks more openly to the infamously pro MAGA Fox News and says that the NATO troops that operated in Afghanistan stayed a little back from the Frontline..

These words are not only another lie from the leader of the MAGA cult, but is a disrespectful, despicable and inaccurate slur to all those from NATO countries, who were subsequently either maimed, injured, killed, or changed forever whilst fighting shoulder to shoulder with their American counterparts, to defend the western free world from the new threats of modern terrorism. I, as well as many others sacrificed blood, sweat and tears, knowing it was all for something greater than ourselves, and now this 5 time draft dodging joke of a politician believes he can just degrade those sacrifices so he can feel superior.

Reminder to Mr. Frump...

British infantry cleared out the insurgency.

British Special Forces and Marines, secured footholds in enemy territory to push back the Taliban threat.

Royal Engineers built the very structures that enabled footholds to be kept and maintained.

British Royalty gunned down the enemy from Apache helicopters, providing air support to any NATO ally that called it in... including US!

This is to only name a few of the British contributions, but it's already proof enough that we didn't just sit back, we were right in the fray.

One of the lads from my regiment died to a snipers bullet. The assassin, was a female ex Iranian Special Forces operative that managed to tag him in an expertly placed shot that exploited the small gaps in his body armour, whilst he worked hard putting in a new checkpoint. Checkpoints that were always built under constant threat from enemy fire...

Our corporals blood had barely dried on the HESCO whilst he fought for an hour after being hit, flying to his final resting place in Bastion. The rest of us having no choice but to rally and finish off the build, standing next to the crimson soaked hessian...

How do I know she was Iranian special forces? Well, because the SAS came through our FOB after they concluded their undercover operation to track her down and put an end to her reign of terror against British troops. A reign, that is still felt in our fallen brothers families lives - two daughters that have had to grow up without a father, and a fiancée who never got to call him her husband, as his untimely demise spelled the cancelling of the wedding in September of 2012 that many of us were excited to attend..

A broken family, that has suffered enough for the last 14 years due to his absence, only to now be insulted by the good ol' president..

The president is a disgrace and an apology is very much owed for this statement. A draft dodger who knows nothing of sacrifice, has no welcome opinion on such topics he knows so little about. Hell, here's a fun fact; Queen Elizabeth II has committed more military service during World War II, than all of Trumps bloodline combined.. and this is the man leading the free world, destroying relationships with allies who have always been there for the US and up until this last week, always would be.. many of us certainly have a different sentiment now, both currently serving and veteran operatives.

Since the interview, Starmer, as well as many other world leaders, have demanded an apology from Trump, for only a couple of days later to read the below statement posted on Truth Social - Trumps moronically ironically titled social media platform:

"The GREAT and very BRAVE soldiers of the United Kingdom will always be with the United States of America! In Afghanistan, 457 died, many were badly injured, and they were among the greatest of all warriors. It's a bond too strong to be broken. The U.K Military, with tremendous Heart and Soul, is second to none (except for the U.S.A.!). We love you all, and always will! President DONALD J. TRUMP"

Cute. But it's no fucking apology DonDon, in fact, it goes even further to passively aggressively insult us even further. We'll always be with the US? A bond too strong to be broken? Second to none, except the USA?

The dear old dried apricot as usual spits his word salad, but among the words as is too common a trend for Trump in a time of wrongdoing is no apology..

The US has allies, but for how long, only the leader of the cult of the new dumb can tell you.

To all those that gave everything. For all my fallen brothers and sisters. To Those I was proud to be shoulder to shoulder with, no matter what part of NATO you came from.. ignore this draft dodging POS. We know what we did, why we did it and why we'd do it again for anyone that asks for it.. even the US, should they decide to remain in NATO..

Perhaps if the need does arise, we should offer an invite to DJT - show him what it takes to actually serve you country, rather than profit from it..
